Locating Journal Articles and Government Publications

Is paper the gold standard? These databases offer PDFs!!

- Academic OneFile
- Academic Search Premier
- CQ Researcher
- JSTOR

The UNC online catalog is used for locating materials on the Chapel Hill Campus.

Search TRLN allows you to search all the triangle area research libraries (Duke, NCCU, NCSU, and UNC) at once.

WorldCat is a global catalog. It connects you to more than 10,000 libraries worldwide.

Whenever possible, LexisNexis Congressional links to PDFs of congressional hearings, reports, and bills, among other documents.

GPO Access is the online Government Printing Office offering PDFs of the CFR, Congressional Record, and other government documents.

Here are a few university library databases that offer PDFs of interdisciplinary sources.

- HeinOnLine
- Law Reviews and Journals
- The Federal Register
- Statutes at Large
- English Reports
- And numerous other sources

Librarian Secrets “ssshhh!”

- Most Federal Agencies have excellent websites with PDFs of documents, reports, and decisions.
- Need a statistic? Try LexisNexis Statistical Universe.
- On campus, only Davis Library is a full gov't depository.
- Google can be your best friend—try putting “pdf” as a search term when looking for articles.

New Study Rooms on the 3rd Floor!!
Most circulating books from the Law Library may be checked out for 30 days, with a maximum of 3 renewals.

You may renew books online with your MyLibrary account. Simply click on MyLibrary at http://library.law.unc.edu/ or on any online catalog page.

Keep in mind other campus libraries may have different loan periods than the Law Library.

All libraries charge fines for overdue books. Remember, the person who checks out material for a journal is responsible for any fines and/or lost book charges that the item incurs.

Feel free to ask the Reference Librarians anything—we have been through it before. All of our reference librarians have a JD and a Masters Degree in Librarianship. Many of us have worked on journals at some point as well. Often we might know of a special database that will save you a lot of time.

Each journal has been assigned a carrel in the library as a space to leave materials for group use by journal staff.

These materials will be checked out for the academic year by Circulation Staff, with a green carrel charge slip placed in each book.

Items eligible for Carrel Charge:
- Circulating material
- Bound volumes of law reviews
- International law material

Items NOT eligible for Carrel Charge:
- Primary US and NC Material (statutes, reports)
- Microforms
- Reserve materials
- Unbound periodicals

Items left in the carrel without a green slip will be re-shelved.

Thank you for your cooperation!
